TECHNICAL DOCUMENT NO. 135

INSECT PESTS OF ECONOMIC SIGNIFICANCE AFFECTING MAJOR CROPS OF THE COUNTRIES IN ASIA AND THE PACIFIC REGION

FOREWORD

The contents of this Technical Document cover the current situation of insect pests of economic significance affecting 22 major crops (maize, rice, sorghum, wheat, cotton, jute, citrus, cocoa, coconut, coffee, oil palm, rubber, sugarcane, tea, tobacco, groundnut, beans, cowpea, pigeon pea, cassava, potato and taro) of the countries in Asia and the Pacific Region.

This is an attempt to compile the list of economically significant species of insect pests affecting the production and their distribution in the Region under each crop based on the information received from Bangladesh, Burma, China, India, Indonesia, Japan, Korea, New Zealand, Papua New Guinea, Solomon Islands, Thailand and Vietnam, and the previous plant protection publications of the FAO Asia and Pacific Plant Protection Commission (APPPC). The scientific names of the pests have been critically checked for the spelling and validity wherever possible. The systematic position of each pest concerned, such as the Order and the Family, are also included for the convenience of the readers.

However, it is quite possible that even the present list may be incomplete to some extent. So no claim is made that it is the comprehensive document. Therefore, readers are requested to send additional information and their comments, if any, to the Regional Plant Protection Officer and Executive Secretary of the APPPC, FAO Regional Office for Asia and the Pacific, Maliwan Mansion, Phra Atit Road, Bangkok 10200, Thailand.
